CITY OF PLYMOUTH

The burying-ground of Plymouth is, of course, a place of great interest to the citizens of the town: and visitors from other places feel a sad pleasure in wandering among the tombs of past generations. A few of these tombs contain remains of the original adventurers; many are occupied by the bodies of their immediate descendants who were imbued with the Pilgrim spirit—worldly enterprise controlled and sanctified by fervid religious faith.

Among the earlier numbers (No. 53, etc.) mention is made of six gravestones bearing dates in the 17th century. As I proceeded in my work I found two others plainly inscribed of the century mentioned, and one next to No. 435 having the face sealed off, so that no inscription is perceptible, but which, judging from its surroundings, is, in all probability, erected at the grave of Nathaniel, son of Nathaniel and Mary Thomas; his death is said to have occurred in 1697,—there are then but eight or nine bearing date of sixteen hundred and odd years.

These are—

William Bradford, 1657.

John Howland, 1672,

Edward Gray, 1681,

William Crowe, 1683-4,

Hannah Clark, 1687,

Thomas Clark, 1697,

Thomas Cushman, 1691,

Ten children of John and Josiah Cotton, 1699, and the defaced tombstone of Nathaniel Thomas (1697?)

It is well known that the earliest burying-ground of the Pilgrim Fathers was on Cole's Hill. To conceal from the Indians all knowledge of the number of deaths among the new settlers, pains were taken to hide all traces of sepulture. Excavations on the hill sometimes reveal long-hidden tombs; and on one of these—near the steps which lead to The Rock—has been placed a polished granite slab, on which is engraved in capitals the following inscriptions:

On this hill the Pilgrims who died the first winter were buried. This tablet marks the spot where lies the body of one found October 8, 1883. The body of another found on the 27th of the following month lies 8 feet northwest of the westerly corner of this stone.

Erected 1884.

The "unlettered muse" spoken of by Gray has, in many instances, supervised the spelling and punctuation on the tombstones of Burial Hill. The various styles of contracted words and the differences in lettering could not be exactly imitated in ordinary type,—but the author of this work has made as close an approximation to the engraved inscriptions as ordinary type would permit. If other than copied errors are found, I believe they will be trifling, and within negligible limits.

Not beauty worth nor friends fond love could save
The lovely victim from the cruel grave.
Like a fair flower that fades in earliest bloom
In life's bright morn she meet her early tomb.

Oh! fare thee well, dearest—thy spirit though gone
Shall live in this desolate bosom alone
Till it burst in the splendor of weakness forgiven
And glorious shine in the lustre of heaven.

[The noted Cushman gravestone of 1691; one of the Six bearing date in the 17th century. The other Five will be particularized when their sites are reached. This Ancient Landmark was removed by the descendants of Elder Thomas Cushman, to make room, as they say, "for a more enduring memorial." The original gravestone of "purple Welsh slate" is as fresh in appearance as if it had just left the hand of the engraver. The new monument is more showy, but whether it will be "more enduring" than the humbler Welsh slate is a question of time,—a question which the descendants of Elder Cushman, some thousand or more years hence, may be able to solve. The inscription on the purple Welsh slate is as follows,—all in capital letters:]

Here lyeth buried ye body of that precious servant of God Mr. Thomas Cushman, who after he had served his generation according to the will of God, and particularly the church of Plymouth for many years in the office of a ruleing elder fell asleep in Jesus Decemr. ye 10, 1691 & in ye 84. year of his age.

This stone placed at the grave of Elder Cushman by the First Church in Plymouth, was removed to this situation in 1858, to make room for a more endureing memorial which now exactly occupies its original position.

No. 54.

[The Cushman Monument. This is a granite column, 25 feet in height. There is a bronze tablet inscribed with capital letters, on each of the four sides of a square member supporting the obelisk. The tablet on the northerly side is as follows:]

ROBERT CUSHMAN

Fellow-exile with the Pilgrims in Holland.

Afterwards their chief agent in England.

Arrived here -IX- November, -MDCXXI,

With Thomas Cushman his son:

Preached -IX- December,

His memorable sermon on "The Danger of self-love

And the sweetness of true friendship:"

Returned to England -XIII- December,

To vindicate the enterprise of Christian emigration;

And there remained in the service of the Colony

Till -MDCXXV,

When, having prepared to make Plymouth

His permanent home,

[Second tablet—West side:]

He died, lamented by the forefathers

as "their ancient friend,—who was

as their right hand with their friends

the adventurers, and for divers years had done and agitated all their business with them to their great advantage."

"And you, my loving friends, the adventurers to this plantation, as your care has been first to settle religion here before either profit or popularity, so, I pray you, go on. —

I rejoice — that you shall be repaid

with your riches, and I trust you shall be repaid

again double and treble in this world, yea,

and the memory of this action shall never die."

DEDICATION OF THE SERMON,

[Third tablet—South side:

THOMAS CUSHMAN,

Son of Robert, died -X- December, MDCXCI,

Aged nearly -LXXXIV- years.

For more than -XLII- years he was

Ruling Elder

Of the First Church in Plymouth,

By whom a tablet was placed to mark his grave

On this spot,

Now consecrated anew by a more enduring memorial.

MARY,

widow of Elder Cushman and daughter of Isaac Allerton,

Died -XXVIII- November, MDCXCIX, aged about -XC- years,

The last survivor of the first comers in the Mayflower.

Those dear remains take one more fond adieu
Of th' work of God, their beauteous clay, which here
In infant charms so lovely did appear
As tho' in nature's nicest model cast,
Exactly polish'd, wrought too fine to last
By the same hand that wrought, again shall they arise
To bloom more gay, more lovely in the skies.

No. 244.

[The Magee monument. The erection of this obelisk is in the highest degree creditable to the public spirit of Stephen Gale, Esq. It is to be regretted, however, that he was not fortunate in the selection of marble as the material for a structure intended to be a permanent memorial of the disastrous shipwreck of the brig Gen. Arnold. The condition of No. 321, and of other marbles which have been erected in later years, is convincing evidence that marble (I speak of such as is generally found in Plymouth cemeteries) is wholly useless for monumental purposes. On the south and west sides of the Magee monument, clefts are apparent in the squared block, the principal one striking the name of Magee.]

(The inscription on the northeasterly side is:)

In memory of Seventy two Seamen who perished in Plymouth harbour on the 26, and 27, days of December 1778, on board the private armed Brig, Gen. Arnold, of twenty guns, James Magee of Boston, Commander, sixty of whom were buried on this spot

(On the northwesterly side:)

Capt. James Magee died in Roxbury, February 4, 1801; aged 51 years.

(Southwesterly side:)

"Oh! falsely flattering were yon billows smooth
When forth, elated, sailed in evil hour,
That vessel whose disastrous fate, when told,
Fill'd every breast with sorrow and each eye
With piteous tears."

(Southeasterly side:)

This monument. marks the resting place of sixty of the seventy two mariners, "who perished in their strife with the storm," and is erected by Stephen Gale of Portland Maine, a stranger to them, as a just memorial of their sufferings and death.

No. 321.

[When a boy I much admired what was then a most beautiful white marble monument, and whenever I crossed the hill, was accustomed to go out of my way to see it. Instead of the Medusa-like head supplied with wings, or even a questionable "cherubic" face, this presented drapery of curtains, arranged in gracefully curving folds. On my return to Plymouth two or three years ago, I sought for this stone unsuccessfully, and supposed it had been removed to Oak Grove. Some time after, I happened to be on Burial Hill at an hour in the morning when the sun's rays threw the incised letters into shadow, when, lo! the familiar name and brief inscription reappeared, though scarcely legible. The only words on the stone which can be read at any time are the two in the epitaph "may endure"—which have no possible reference to white marble. A V-shaped portion is gone from the top at centre; the monument is gray, and wasting away, grain by grain. It is to be regretted that this same material, apparently from the same quarry, has been so extensively employed here. Eighty years is a longer period than white marble can be expected to endure; it is but seventy years since my boyish fancy was charmed with the beauty of 321,— now unread and unobserved.]

What though this sad this gloomy hill contains
Of relatives and friends the loved remains
Yet in our breasts let cheerful hopes arise
Again to meet in "mansions" of the skies.

[NOTE (by the author). The above epitaph was written by Mr. Benjamin Drew (b. 1767) a son of the decedent. The same Mr. Drew was once requested to write an epitaph on Mr. Barnabas Holmes (No. 680) his brother-in-law, who attained the ripe age of 81 years. Mr. Drew wrote the following:

By temperance taught, a few, advancing slow,
To distant fate by easy journeys go.
Calmly they lie then down like evening sheep,—
On their own woolly fleeces softly sleep.

—but objection arose to these lines on the ground that Mr. Holmes had, at some time in his life, been a mutton-dealer! Accordingly Mr. Drew threw them aside, and penned the epitaph now on the monument No. 680.]

[NOTE (by author). The family of which the above named decedent was a member, lived at the corner of High and Spring streets, and, in common with the residents of the neighborhood, were obliged to procure water from the spring at the foot of the hill. To save this trouble they dug a well on the north side of High street, near the house formerly occupied by Capt. Zachens Barnes, and but a short distance from the boundary of Burial Hill. Soon after beginning to use the well-water, typhoid fever broke out among the children of the vicinity, eight of whom, including this Benjamin Drew, 3d, died. The well was then abandoned.]

[One of the six bearing date in the 17th century. It is, as Mr. Davis informs us, (see "Ancient Landmarks") of purple Welsh slate. It is in good condition, is handsomely carved, and is protected by a hood of galvanized iron. Symbol. The inscription is in capital letters.]

Here lyes ye body of Mr Thomas Clark aged 98 years departed this life March ye 24th 1697.

(The footstone bears the symbol, and the words:)

Mr. Thomas Clark 1697.

[It was in 1889 that I copied the inscriptions on Burial Hill. Since then I have inserted a few from such new monuments as came under my observation. Among these is the following, copied from a metallic plate secured to a huge boulder recently placed on the grave of Thomas Clark. On said plate this name is spelled "Clarke," which forbids us to suppose that the spelling reform, of omitting silent letters, caused Mr. Clark's descendants to leave out the letter S in two words of the inscription.]

(All in capital letters on the plate.)

Here lies buried ye body of Mr. Thomas Clarke, aged 98. Departed this life March 24, 1697. Thomas Clarke came to Plymouth from England in the ship Anne 1623. He married Susan Ring of Plymouth, 1634. Their children were Andrew, James, William, Susanna, Nathaniel and John. From whom descended a numerous posterity. He married his second wife Mrs. Alice Hallett Nichols of Boston, in 1664. He lived for some years in Boston, and also in Harwich of which town he was one of the original proprietors. He died in Plymouth, having lived in the reigns of six British sovereigns and the Com'th.

This stone is erected to his memory by his descendants A. D. 1891.

No. 634.

[Another of the six 17th century monuments. Blue slate, cleft downwards from the top, separating about one-third of the stone. Stone is inclined. It has no moss, and the inscription is perfectly clear and plain. The lettering, as on many of the oldest stones, is in capital letters, which in this work I have not deemed it advisable to endeavor to imitate. Symbol.]

All ye that doth behold my stone
Consider how soon I was gone
Death does not always warning give
Therefore be careful how you live
Repent in time, no time delay
I in my prime was called away.

[NOTE (by the Author). The above epitaph was written by Mrs. Tabitha Plasket (said to have been a school teacher), the wife of the decedent. She also penned the epitaph for herself (see No. 682 a.), which is remarkable for a certain independence of spirit. Its first line corresponds with a remark made, near the close of her life, by Miss Harriet Martineau, and which is doubtless shared by many aged people.]

After a life well spent he's now at rest,
His very name and memory is blest.

[NOTE. The original inscription & epitaph on this stone were in capitals; but the face of the stone disintegrated and scaled off, wherefore the surface was smoothed, and the legend recut in "lower case" letters. "Here lyes ye" was changed to "Here lies the"; the "u" in "honourable" was omitted, and the short "&" beginning the second line of the epitaph was replaced by "And"; Bradford's age formerly seemed to read "70 y'rs" but "79"—the correct age—appears in the newly cut inscription.—B. D.]

That gentle one has passed away
No more to roam with us below ;
And gone to realms of brighter day,
Where storms of woe shall cease to flow
Where'er our eyes do chance to fall,
We find some relie left behind

That will her feeble form recall
 And bring her peaceful voice to mind
 Then we'll not wish her back again,
 But think she's happy now on high
 No more to strive with earthly pain
 No more to weep and groan and die
 And as we ne'er can meet below
 Our only wish & prayer shall be
 That when far hence we're called to go,
 We may in heaven her spirit see.

He that wounds can heal.

Sacred to the memory of CAPT. EZRA HARLOW, who died suddenly Oct. 27th 1840, aged 68 yrs.

Our loss is his gain, though the body lies mouldering beneath the sod, the Spirit has gone to God, there to receive the reward of all his labours of love. he lived a life of self denial that he might relieve the distress'd, though dead he lives forevermore O glorious hope, O bles'd abode, I shall be near and like my God, O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments; and his ways past finding out!

I leave the world without a tear,
Save for the friends I hold so dear,
To heal her sorrow, Lord, descend,
And to the friendless prove a friend.

The sick, the pris'ner, poor and blind,
And all the sons of grief,
In him a benefactor found
He loved to give relief.

Tis love that makes religion sweet
Tis love that makes us rise
With willing minds and ardent feet
To yonder happy skies.

Then here has met an early blight,
No fairer eye has ever glowed
And beamed with intellectual Light.
Yet scarce we mourn his manly form
When once his nobler heart we view,
In love so kind, in friendship warm,
In honor and devotion true.
O grave! thy triumph all shall be,
To guard awhile this precious dust,
The LORD of life is Lord of thee
And thou shalt render back thy trust.

(NOTE.—Augustus F. Simmons was a frank, ingenuous and sincere youth, beloved by all his schoolmates,—one of whom was the writer of these lines. George W. Hosmer, our teacher, was much moved by the death of so promising a youth ; and at Mr. Hosmer's suggestion many if not all the members of the school attended the funeral. Benjamin Drew was one of the eight bearers. White bands of cloth were secured about the casket containing the remains of our friend and schoolmate, and grasping these bands, we carried the precious burden from the house at the head of Water street to its final resting place. Those who knew young Simmons have never ceased to regret his early exit.)

The beauteous flower that charms the eye
And decks the smiling plain,
With winter's blast shall fade and die,
But die to bloom again
Then why should sorrow wring thy brow
Say mourner say why weepest thou?

[This No. takes the place of No. 376, q. v. 2161 is a fine, beautiful block of slate, firm and compact. It is six inches in thickness, and about four feet high. This stone has been substituted for the former one in order to correct what Bradford's History of Plymouth Colony shows to have been an error. On the new stone a vessel under sail takes the place of the old-time symbol; and on the upper corners are sculptured representations of scallop shells.]

Here ended the Pilgrimage of JOHN HOWLAND who died February 23, 1672-3, aged above 80 years. He married Elizabeth daughter of JOHN TILLEY who came with him in the Mayflower Dec. 1620. From them are descended a numerous posterity.

"He was a godly man and an ancient professor in the wayes of Christ. He was one of the first comers into this land and was the last man that was left of those that came over in the Shipp called the Mayflower that lived in Plymouth."

Near the site of the pest-house are several graves; two are marked by headstones,—only one however, has an inscription; this it seems to the author advisable to insert, although from the circumstances of the case the interment of Mrs. Mayhew was remote from Burial Hill:]

MARY MAYHEW wife of THOMAS MAYHEW, Esqr. who Decd Sept. 3d 1776 Aged 54 years.

[NOTE. If any errors or omissions are discovered in this work, the author would be glad to be informed thereof, that the proper corrections and insertions may be made in a third edition. But he requests his correspondents not to delay; for, being in his 85th year, he is perfectly aware that ere long the crossbones and hour-glass may decorate his own headstone. Address BENJAMIN DREW, 48 Summer street, Plymouth, Mass.]
